CULTURAL AND HERITAGE RESOURCE MANAGEMENT (MPCH)

abstract
The Master of Professional Studies in Cultural and Heritage Resource Management provides advanced training for those interested in working in the applied specialization of cultural resource management and heritage resource management. The coursework and training bridge the knowledge and experience gap between what is offered in a traditional academic course of study and the knowledge and skills required in cultural and heritage resource management. The program is built on a broad foundation including research methods, ethics, communication, management, technical writing, and critical thinking skills.
