Chinese Major

The Chinese major (CHIN) provides the training and cultural background needed for entering East Asia-related careers in such fields as higher education, the arts, business, government, international relations, agriculture, or the media. Students may also consider a double major in Chinese and another discipline such as business, government and politics, economics, or journalism. Chinese students have the option of applying to live in St. Mary's Hall (Language House) and participating in a study abroad program.

Program Learning Outcomes

Linguistically, students will reach Intermediate-High to Advanced-Low, as measured by ACTFL (American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages) standards, in speaking, listening, reading, and writing Mandarin Chinese. Students will demonstrate a good understanding of the development of Modern Chinese in the 20th and 21st centuries; the historical relationship between Modern Standard Chinese and Chinese dialects; the characteristics of the Chinese writing system; and the relationship between Chinese and minority languages spoken in China. Literarily and culturally, students will demonstrate critical and close reading skills of classical and modern Chinese literature; an understanding of the inherent relationships between life, society, and fictional representation; a familiarity with representative works of contemporary Chinese literature and cinema; and the ability to see how art interacts with, and provides unique perspectives on politics, history, and society at large.

1 Students placing into the program at higher levels should reach at least the level of CHIN302 or CHIN306 but may substitute non-language courses on China-related subjects for some of these 18 credits. (The final decision on what substitute courses may be used for the major rests with the Chinese Program and Chinese Advisor.)

2 In addition to all the specific courses listed under "Non-language Requirements" above, language courses and independent study may also be used toward this requirement.

Special Topics and Colloquium courses (those with variable numbers, ending in 8 or 9 and followed by a letter) may be acceptable depending on the actual title and content of the course at the time it is offered. The final determination is in the hands of the Chinese Program and the Chinese advisor.

Students must earn a grade of "C-" or higher in each course applied toward a major or minor in the School of Languages, Literatures, and Cultures. Additionally, an overall GPA of 2.0 in a major or minor is required for graduation.
