Behavioral and Community health focuses on individual and community lifestyle behaviors and aspects of our social environment that affect our health. Practitioners and researchers in this field use theory and evidence based practices to seek out ways to encourage people to make healthy choices. The Department of Behavioral and Community Health prepares graduates to improve the health of communities through health promotion and disease prevention. By understanding the different aspects of behavioral and community health, students are able to actively engage with communities to develop approaches and solutions to everyday health issues.

Behavioral and Community health also seeks to improve the public's health through the application of social and behavioral sciences. Through studying behavior, graduates are able to not just understand disease, but are also able to modify the incidence, prevalence, and mortality rates of many diseases that affect the communities in which we live. Additionally, community health specialists promote more efficient uses of health services, adopt self-care practices, and participate actively in the design and implementation of health programs.

The Department of Behavioral and Community Health works to establish community relationships in order to develop community interventions. The faculty and students of this department promote and foster active collaboration with researchers and community partners from many different specialties and institutions. By working with the University of Maryland, the department has established several partnerships and research and service centers that work to actively engage the community in a variety of capacities.

Advising
In the Community Health major academic advising is not mandatory, but is strongly encouraged. It is recommended that students meet with an academic advisor once per semester at a minimum. To schedule an academic advising appointment with Matt Wootten or Jenny Hodgson, Community Health Academic Advisors, go to: https://appointments-sphl.umd.edu/ramonline

Opportunities
Internships
HLTH491: Community Health Internship

HLTH491: Community Health Internship is a unique and rewarding experience that provides Community Health majors with the opportunity to work in a mentored, professional, public and community health setting prior to graduation. This required internship is completed during the student’s final semester after all other academic requirements have been successfully completed. HLTH491 is a 12 credit, 36 hours per week (15 weeks) requirement, and should be considered a full-time commitment. Students may not enroll in other classes during the internship semester.

HLTH491 may be completed during the fall, spring, or summer semesters; for planning purposes, summer internships require an application. Questions related to HLTH491: Community Health Internship may be directed to Tracy Kennedy, Undergraduate Internship Program Manager, at kennedyt@umd.edu.

Community Health Honors Program
The Department of Behavioral and Community Health Honors Program offers undergraduates the opportunity to engage in challenging educational experiences related to social and behavioral aspects of public health. Rising juniors with strong academic records and significant interest in intellectual pursuits are invited to apply for this opportunity to partake in independent, mentored, scholarly work.

Students interested in the Community Health Honors program must meet the following requirements:

- Student in the Community Health major
- Overall GPA of 3.5 or higher
- Have successfully completed at least 3 HLTH courses (9 credits) with a major GPA of 3.5 or higher
- Must have taken HLTH200 by the start of the program
- Have completed 45 total credits before applying to the program (students should be of junior standing [approximately 60 credits] by the first semester in the program)
- Must have at least 2 semesters left of coursework prior to the HLTH491 Community Health Internship

Community Health Honors Program highlights include:

Behavioral and Community Health

- Working one on one with a Department of Behavioral and Community Health faculty member on a thesis/project
- Graduating with distinction of departmental honors
- Ability to take HONR seminars and be a part of the UMD Honors College
- Access to HLTH410, a small, seminar-style Honors Program course to develop personal interests and professional skills

Interested students may learn more about the Community Health Honors Program by going to: http://sph.umd.edu/department/bch/undergraduate-honors-program or contacting Dr. Kerry Green, Honors Program Director, at greenkm@umd.edu.
